QUICK HISTORY OF EXTENSION

The Cooperative Extension System officially was created in 1914.

- The federal Government's intent was to have land-grant universities bring current information to rural communities to improve economic development, home economics, agricultural practices, and youth development (4-H).
- Funding to support the Extension Service nationwide comes from the federal and state government. This funding pays for faculty and research costs.
- Each county provides office space and staff to support Extension programming.

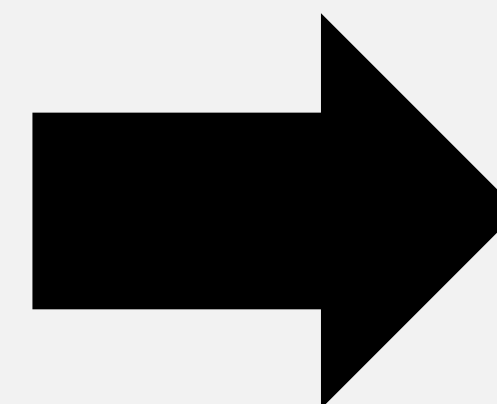

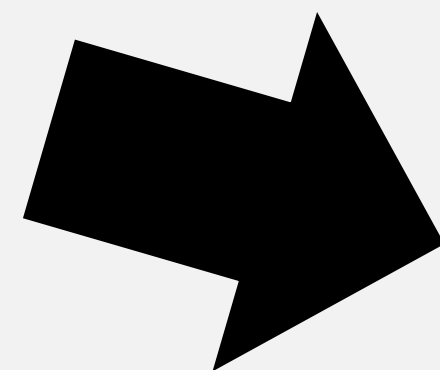

THE PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION SYSTEM OF RESEARCH BASED INFORMATION

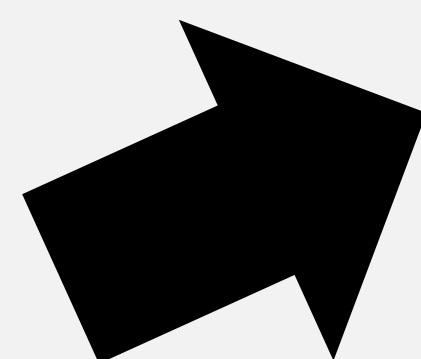

1. Needs are expressed by taxpayers.
2. The University Specialists respond by performing research that produces information to meet those needs.
3. Information is then provided by state specialists to County Extension Educators.
4. Extension Educators provide educational programming that takes the information to the clientele.
5. Extension Educators collect information from clientele on new and emerging issues and relay that back to state specialists.
